

Nomura Greentech hires Pearse Davidson as Managing Director in the Environmental Services and Technologies practice and Industrials and Business Services

September 21, 2022

Nomura Greentech is pleased to announce that Pearse Davidson has joined the firm as a Managing Director.

Based in New York, Pearse will focus on the Environmental Services and Technologies practice as well as Industrials and Business Services.

Pearse was most recently a Managing Director at J.P. Morgan where he spent 15 years advising companies across various industrial sectors. For the past 8 years, he specialized in Business Services, where he was instrumental in developing a premier investment banking franchise. Notably, Pearse has advised numerous environmental firms and led mission-critical, global M&A transactions, IPOs and other equity raises as well as debt financings. He is a graduate of Washington & Lee University where he received a B.S. with Special Attainments in Commerce.

Jeff McDermott, Global Co-head of Investment Banking at Nomura and founder of Nomura Greentech said, "Environmental and Industrial Services companies will play a crucial role in the world reaching net zero carbon emissions by 2050 and the sector is a core part of Nomura Greentech's franchise. Pearse is an experienced banker with an outstanding track record and we are delighted that he is joining the team."

Pearse Davidson said, "I am thrilled to be joining the Nomura Greentech team. The firm has made an incredible impact across its client base through a dedication to differentiated thought leadership and excellence in client service. For environmental and industrial services companies, sustainability is a multi-decade megatrend that will create significant opportunities but also require an investment of time and resources. Through our combined efforts and expertise, I believe Nomura Greentech can guide our clients towards long-term success and become the most trusted advisor in the sector."
